The House on the Hill

There was a little boy named Tom. He lived in a small village. Every day, he walked to school with his friends. But on the way to school, there was a big, dark house on the hill. Everyone said, "Don't go near the house! It's scary." Tom wanted to know why.

One day, Tom was walking home alone. It was late, and the sky was dark. The moon was high, and the wind was cold. Tom looked up at the house. It was very quiet. No lights. No people. He thought, "Maybe I can look closer. Just for a second."

Tom climbed the hill. The house was big and old. The door was open a little. Creak! He pushed it. Inside, it smelled bad. The floor was dusty. Suddenly, he heard a noise. Tap, tap, tap. "Hello?" Tom whispered. But no one answered.

He walked into a room. There was a table with a plate of cookies. The cookies looked new and fresh. "Who made these?" Tom thought. He touched one, but then—BANG! The door shut behind him!

Tom turned around. He saw something move. It was a shadow. A tall shadow. He froze.

Then, the shadow stepped into the light. It was a little old lady with a kind smile. She said, "Oh, hello, dear! Are you hungry? I've just baked these cookies. You must be cold. Come, sit down."

Tom felt silly for being scared. He sat and ate a cookie. It was warm and sweet. But then the lady smiled wider. Her teeth were sharp. Too sharp.

"You're my favourite kind of visitor," she said. The door locked. The wind outside howled.

No one saw Tom again...
